Irene Brunetti
INAPP - National Institute for Public Policy Analysis

- 1. Define future of work scenarios with a specific focus on the evolution of non-standard workers and self-employed career in view of the challenges presented by the digitalization of work.
- 2. Assess the relevance of the risks of inadequacy of public pension benefits by simulating the future career of workers (by a dynamic micro-simulation model T-DYMM).
- 3. Assess pros and cons of the current design of the Italian private second and third pensions pillars and analyze the influence of the private pensions schemes.

The added value of M.O.S.P.I. project

It offers the opportunity to evaluate a number of alternative policy scenarios in order to assess the effectiveness and sustainability of different recommendations to reform the social protection system with the aim to ensure the access to social protection for non standard workers and self employed.

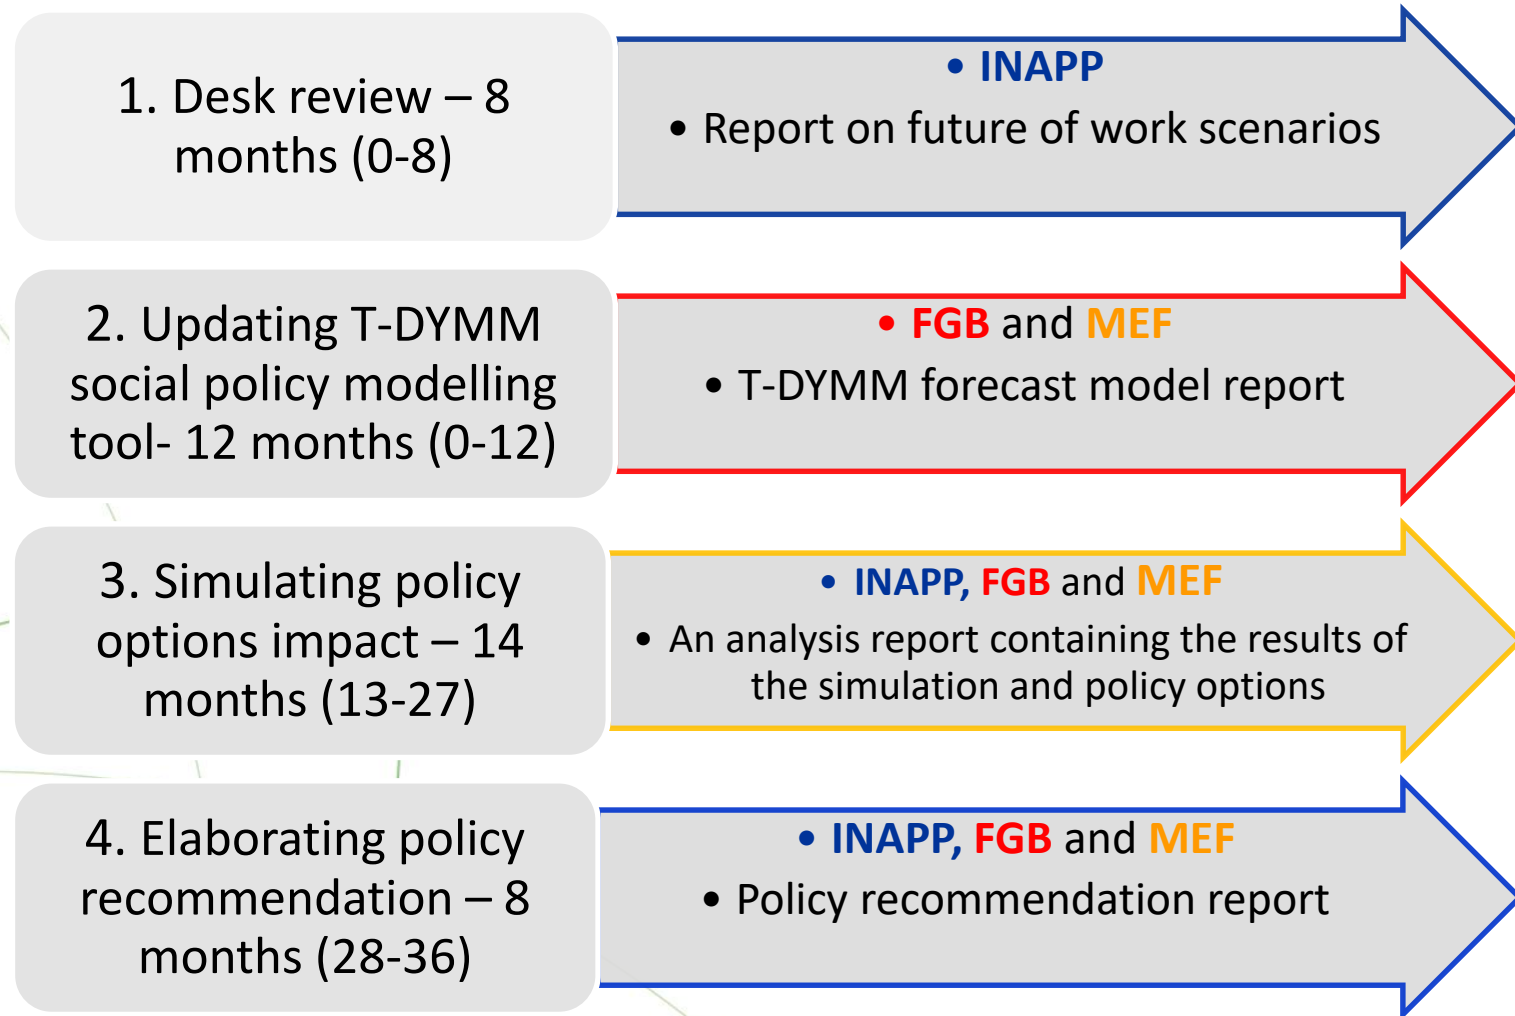

At National level

- To have access to first hand dataset and, to build specific/targeted scenarios and estimations of costs and benefits of suggested reforms.

At European level

- The MOSPI exercise is a pilot experience both in terms of methodology and results;
- The use of sophisticated econometrics techniques and dynamic simulation models.
